Akron History Trails – Get Your Passport

Although 1931 was darkened by the Great Depression, it was also a year of progress for the city of Akron. During that year, five of the city's most notable buildings were constructed, the YMCA, YWCA, Mayflower Hotel, First Merit Tower (then Central Depositors Bank and Trust), and the Akron Fulton Airport Terminal. To celebrate the 75th year of these landmarks, the City of Akron, along with First Merit and the partners of the Lock 3 Akron History Museum, are sponsoring the Akron History Trails Project.

Beginning the weekend of July 4, Akron residents will have an opportunity to visit these as well as other historic buildings and institutions. Visitors may pick up an Akron History Trails "passport" at participating institutions, visit each of twenty-one sites, and have their passports stamped. Participants are encouraged to bring their completed passports to the Akron Reading Festival on September 23 to receive a commemorative gift. Those who have collected all twenty-one stamps will be eligible for a prize drawing.

Cuyahoga Falls Newspapers on Microfilm

Special Collections extends a very special thank you to the Summit County Chapter of the Ohio Genealogical Society for generously donating funds to reproduce the Cuyahoga Falls Reporter from 1870-1952. This latest addition greatly enhances our local newspaper collection, and will surely be a valuable resource for family historians. We would also like to thank the Cuyahoga Falls Library for agreeing to loan their film to be reproduced.

2006 Ohio & Erie Canalway Symposium: Implementing Regional Innovation

On April 5, 2006, The Ohio & Erie Canalway Association (OECA) held their Canalway Symposium at Main Library. The OECA is an organization designated by Congress to manage the Ohio and Erie National Heritage Canalway which stretches from downtown Cleveland to the Tuscarawas River Valley. The symposium was geared for non-profit organizations and several interesting group sessions were held throughout the day. These sessions, presented by the OECA, addressed questions about how the Ohio and Erie Canal is presented in school classrooms as well as how to interpret and present information about the Ohio and Erie Canal. Creative partnering with varied organizations was also a popular topic.

One of the featured events of the Symposium was the debut of the new OECA website. It presents the history of the Ohio and Erie Canal, as well as current maps of the Canalway and surrounding parks and recreation areas that are a part of the Heritage Area. This attractive website provides a gateway to information about the varied events hosted by different organizations along the canalway. A visitor can create an itinerary on line that includes a wide range of events hosted by different organizations. Presenting all of these organizations and events together provides visitors with a much more complete and interesting view of the canal's important history.

Share some of the excitement of the canalway, visit <http://www.ohioanderiecanalway.com> and plan your next visit through this historic corridor.

Celebrating the Life & Music of Pat Pace

A musical tribute and memorial was held on May 2nd at Beth El Congregation to honor the recently deceased musician, Pat Pace. A child prodigy and a student of the Juilliard School of Music in piano composition, his reputation was largely built on his unique ability to compose jazz. He was also a prominent figure in classical music in Northeast Ohio. He was not only a soloist for the Akron Symphony Orchestra, but his classical compositions were performed by the Akron Symphony Orchestra, the Cleveland Philharmonic, and by other national organizations.

The memorial tribute presented Pat Pace's work from the late 1950s to 2005, showcasing many past and recent works that were previously unpublished. This celebration was made possible by the efforts of Roland Paolucci and the Pace family, who were gracious enough to open up this memorial event to the general public. The 16 selected pieces written by Pat were played by several different musicians, including some of Pat's past students, long-time fellow musicians, and two outstanding big band numbers, each performed by the University of Akron Jazz Ensemble and the Kent State University Jazz Ensemble, respectively. There were also brief yet very touching stories told by Pat Pace's widow, Lisa Pace, and his son, Adam Pace. A few other friends were willing to share special moments and memories of their unforgettable experiences with Pat.

For anyone who truly appreciates jazz music, and for the standing-room-only crowd who came to hear Pat Pace's music, it was an unforgettable evening. For more information about this musician's life and work see www.patpace.com.

Mary Gladwin

You may have missed it, but each year National Nurses Day is recognized on May 6. With that in mind, did you know that Akron was home to one of the more prominent American nurses? She was even awarded the profession's highest international honor. It's true. She was Akron's own Mary Elizabeth Gladwin.

Mary was born in Staffordshire, England on December 24, 1861 and came to America as a small child with her parents, settling in Akron. After graduating from Buchtel College (now the University of Akron) in 1887, she was a schoolteacher for a few short years. But by 1895, Akron city directories reveal she had decided to enter the nursing profession. When the Spanish-American War began, Mary went to Cuba, Puerto Rico, and later the Philippines working as a nurse. In 1904, she went to Hiroshima, Japan and worked there along with other American volunteer nurses treating the wounded from the Russo-Japanese war. For this service, she was decorated by the Emperor of Japan.

Returning to Akron to be with her ailing mother, Mary worked as a company nurse for the B.F. Goodrich Co., a position she held for several years.

In March of 1913, Ohio suffered perhaps the worst natural disaster in its history with much of the state being severely flooded. Mary was dispatched to hard-hit Dayton to supervise the Red Cross relief staff working in that city. Then, in 1914, she spent more than a year in Belgrade, Serbia treating the wounded in the Serbian – Austrian conflict. During all her time in Belgrade, she kept a diary of her daily life and the hardships she endured. Entries from the diary reveal in startling clarity the horrors she witnessed with many excerpts reading like a Hollywood screenplay. The diary survived and is held by Archival Services at the University of Akron.

After coming home again, she was instrumental in founding and organizing the Red Cross chapter here in Akron in June of 1916. Shortly afterwards, she returned to Europe for two years where she worked with refugees from many nations in Saloniki, Greece. In recognition of her many accomplishments and dedicated service, in 1920 she received from the International Red Cross Society, Nursing's highest award – the Florence Nightingale Medal.

In the post-war years, Mary appeared on the lecture circuit and served as inspector for various nursing schools in the states of Indiana, Arkansas and Minnesota. After this, she served as superintendent of nurses at St. Mary's Hospital in Rochester, Minnesota, a branch of the Mayo Clinic. She even found time to author three books including Ethics for Nurses, which for many years served as the "bible" of nursing students at the University of Akron. Akron-Summit County Public Library's Special Collections Division holds copies of her books. Modest by nature, she avoided the limelight whenever possible going so far as to request the Beacon Journal to omit putting her name in print.

Mary died November 22, 1939 in Akron and is buried in the modest family plot in Glendale Cemetery. Despite her many accomplishments, her tombstone bears only the short notation "Women's Overseas Service League." Mary would have approved of the simplicity.

Italian Ancestors in Akron

It is difficult to determine exactly when the first Italian came to Akron. We know that Italians have been immigrating to this part of the world since Cristoforo Columbus arrived in 1492, however, they did not start coming in larger numbers until much later. According to government statistics, many of the earliest immigrants of Italian origin came from Northern Italy at a rate of 300 per year from 1820 to 1850, and about 1,000 persons a year after 1860. Over 5 million Italians immigrated to this country from 1875-1930, of which 80% were from southern Italy and Sicily.

Most of the information we can find on Italian ancestry in the United States really doesn't begin until after 1880, even more is available after 1900. Many came to Akron to work in the rubber factories as so many immigrants did, but they also worked as laborers, merchants, restaurateurs, and stonemasons. It was a common practice for many Italian immigrants to travel back to Italy bringing money for family left behind. In some cases they stayed in the old county to wait out an economic downturn or because US immigration law changed preventing their return. An example of this is when in 1893, the Akron Beacon Journal reported that an outbreak of Cholera in Naples caused a temporary ban on Italians from entering or re-entering the US.

After 1900, we begin seeing Italians as a large group of Akron's population. According to the articles reported in the Akron Beacon Journal, there seemed to be a very high peak of Italians and other immigrants coming to Akron between 1902 and 1914. In 1902, the Akron Beacon Journal reports on Italian parades and cultural celebrations such as Columbus Day, The Feast of the Blessed Virgin Mary, and other activities relating to Italian heritage. The newspaper article [right] is one example. There were also many Italian-American societies in existence by the early 1900s such as the Sons of Italy, Italian-American Society, Italian-American Republican Club (as well as one for democrats), The Italian-American Political Club, Akron Christopher Columbus Society, and others. For information about today's Italian-American societies, visit the Council of Italian-American Societies at <http://www.it-am.org>.

Akron Beacon Journal, September 9, 1903

North Akron is the area with the densest population of Italian-Americans, aptly called Akron's Little Italy. In 1922, the old viaduct bridge provided access to this area, which led many Italian immigrants to buy houses and start small businesses. This in turn created an active community and ensured a vital neighborhood for many years. Establishing homes in the North Hill area also allowed families to remain close to downtown, where many immigrants earned their living. When the coal mining industry in Oklahoma slowed down, this neighborhood welcomed many Italian immigrants leaving Oklahoma. By the 1930s, Italians were the largest immigrant group by population in Akron.

Unfortunately, the general march to the suburbs in the 60s and 70s effected many neighborhoods, including North Hill. The opening of the All-American Bridge in 1981 did help a little in boosting the commerce in North Akron, but rehabilitation has been slow. Fortunately today you can still experience the Italian heritage of the area at some of the remaining local businesses. There are cannolis from Ninni's Italian Pastry Shop, fresh homemade goods from DeViti's Italian Market, a hot pizza from Emidio and Sons Restaurant, or a fine meal at Nick Anthe's restaurant.

When you begin doing research on your Italian ancestor, you will want to brush up on your Italian history and read about the critical changes occurring after 1870 in Italy. These were contributing factors to the large population of Italians that emigrated here. Learning a little about the geography of where your ancestors came from, be it Italy, Sicily, or Sardinia, may also be helpful.

One great way to trace your Italian ancestor in Akron is by using our Akron City Directories. We have copies that go back as far as 1871. These directories are very helpful in that they list residences and businesses that could be important in putting together the picture of how your ancestor lived when they arrived in this area.

Fortunately, for those of us descended from Italians, records are usually available because our ancestors immigrated in the late 19th and early 20th centuries. Special Collections has created Research Guides that can help you find your Italian immigrant ancestor: Researching Italian Ancestors, Identifying Immigrant Ancestors, Naturalization Research, and Passenger List Research.

The weekend will kick off on Friday, June 30 at 10:30 am with the dedication of the newest portion of the Towpath Trail, which connects the Cascade Locks Park with Downtown Akron. The Akron Family Barbecue starts on June 30 and ends with a traditional fireworks display at 9:45 pm. Be sure to visit the Lock 3 Akron History Museum in the O'Neil's Commons. For more information about this summer's events in Akron, visit the City of Akron's website at <http://www.ci.akron.oh.us/>.

On Exhibit

The Cascade Locks Park Association (CLPA), one of the partners of the Ohio & Erie Canalway Association, is a vital member of the downtown community. Their mission is to preserve, protect and promote the industrial, commercial and cultural history of Cascade Locks Park which runs along locks 10-16 of the Ohio and Erie Canal. This area has been designated the Cascade Locks Historic District. The Special Collections Division of the Akron-Summit County Public Library helps to organize and preserve CLPA's archives. We featured this important organization during the Canalway Symposium by creating an exhibit highlighting the many positive changes in the community for which they are responsible. From preserving original structures like the Mustill Store, to helping push forward the development of the Towpath Trail through downtown Akron, CLPA has become a major part of downtown Akron's renewal and progress.

Coming in late June is an exhibit on Akron during its building boom of 1931. Landmark attractions such as the YWCA, the YMCA, the Mayflower Hotel, First Merit Bank Tower (formerly known as Central-Depositors Bank & Trust) and the Fulton Airport Terminal were all built in 1931. It was the year that the mighty airship the USS Akron was christened for flight at the newly constructed Goodyear Airdock. But it was also the beginning of the Great Depression when the economy was crumbling with over 11 million people unemployed. Racial violence was again on the rise, and gangsters and bootleggers were still active in the last years of Prohibition. Movies were still racy and sassy before enforcement of new censorship laws while fashions were raising the waistlines and softening edges. Benny Goodman was swinging and women were swooning when Rudy Vallee and Bing Crosby sang. People gathered around radios listening to the St. Louis Cardinals make a comeback or read novels by Dashiell Hammett or Agatha Christie. Be sure to visit the exhibit and help Akron celebrate 1931 and all of the changes it brought.

Soap Box Derby Index

Since 1935, Akron has hosted the Annual All-American Soap Box Derby. For years, ASCPL staff has been clipping newspaper articles for vertical files to document the history of one of Akron's most famous events. Those clippings have led to the creation of the Soap Box Derby Database.

This regularly-updated database serves as an index to newspaper articles from the very first local race held in Dayton, Ohio in 1933, to recently published articles in the Akron Beacon Journal. The database can be searched by date, keyword, title, or subject and once the correct reference is found, the full article can be printed from Akron Beacon Journal microfilm. The original clippings files from which the database was created are still available and have been added to the Soap Box Derby Collection.

On Line Records Update

The Missouri Death Certificate Database and index are now available online at <http://www.sos.mo.gov/archives/resources/deathcertificates/>.

The index can be searched by first and last names, county, and by year and month of death. Once a name is selected, a digitized image of the original certificate can be retrieved. Although the index is complete (1910-1955), digital images are only available through 1922. The project is on-going, so more records will be available in the future.
